Supplication: “What we can meditate”

Father, we praise You for family. You tell us that it is not good for us to be alone, and therefore have placed people around us that impact our lives and move us away from the loneliness of solitude. Help us Father to remember that the family we live with is not responsible for our happiness. They are not charged with the status of our hearts and souls. And they cannot control how we feel, nor leap into our minds in an effort to understand the depth of our emotions.

When we are misunderstood or a family member misunderstands us, we feel hopeless to plead our case. Help us to hold on to your strength. Help us to be patient. Through the power of Your Holy Spirit, inspire us to recall who You say we are. Loved. Forgiven. Saved. Purposed. Unique.

Father help us to pass the same compassion on to others who wear on our hearts and patience. Bless us to be patient and wise, to seek You first, and speak kindness. Convict us when we are wrong, and strengthen our resolve to unity. By Your guidance, anything, and anyone, can be restored. You are our Healer. In You, we find peace. Our hope lies in You. And faith can pull us across any divide when we let go and let You determine the way.

In Jesus' name. Amen.
